March 10, 2016

Germany Today 2016: Application Deadline March 14th

The 2016 Germany Today trip will take place from June 12-18 under the heading Germany's Higher Education Institutions and Their Training Strategies for a Changing Employment Market. This year's itinerary includes stops at institutions in Stuttgart, Heidelberg, Darmstadt and Bonn where the issue of increasing student employability will be considered from a variety of disciplinary perspectives.

Participants in the Germany Today tour are typically senior administrators from universities, research institutions and funding agencies or policy makers working in related fields.

Program-related costs in Germany (accommodation, domestic travel and most meals) are covered by DAAD. Applications to participate will be accepted until March 14, 2016.

Call for Nominations to DAAD Young Ambassador Program

Have you heard of the DAAD Young Ambassador program? This program helps returning study abroad students put their newfound knowledge and experience to good use.

DAAD Young Ambassadors are undergraduate students from North America who have recently studied or interned in Germany and are interested in promoting study in Germany at their home institutions. Each year DAAD recruits approximately students from all over the US and Canada to share with their peers what makes Germany a unique and attractive destination for study abroad.

DAAD Young Ambassadors are responsible for organizing at least one event per semester on their campuses. Additionally, they collaborate with their universities' study abroad offices and other German institutions in their areas to inform their fellow students on educational and research opportunities on offer in Germany. DAAD Young Ambassadors are also available for email inquiries about their respective German host universities, study abroad programs or student life in Germany. To learn more about the current group of Young Ambassadors, please visit, <https://www.daad.org/ya2015-16>.

DAAD is currently accepting nominations for the 2016-17 Young Ambassadors from university study abroad and international offices (Only one student may be nominated per college or university).

The deadline for submissions is May 18, 2016.
