Universities of Applied Sciences (“Fachhochschulen”) emerged in the early 1970s to provide a practical driven university education in close collaboration with businesses and industries.

- Interesting Numbers:
  - Almost half of all 427 universities in Germany are UAS (216)
  - Around one third of all students go to UAS
  - UAS account for two thirds of all graduates in engineering in Germany (70% of all engineering students are UAS graduates)
  (Data: DAAD Winter Semester 2015/16)

- Goal is to prepare students for their professional careers through application-oriented instruction in close collaboration with industry

- Strong focus on teaching, less focus on basic theory and research ("Grundlagenforschung")
MAJOR STRENGTHS OF UNIVERSITIES OF APPLIED SCIENCES

- UAS professors have at least 5 years of business/industry experience
- Internships/practical semesters are mandatory features for students
- Study projects, practical projects and thesis are conducted in close alignment to industry
- Lectures are conducted in small groups (generally no more than 40 students per lecture)
- Hands-on teaching methods: labs, tutorials, simulations, role-playing, projects and field trips
- Applied research in cooperation with companies and application-oriented research institutes
- Regionally rooted and internationally connected
- Excellent transition into the labor market for most UAS graduates…
